

Extra Activities

Follow the Leader

Start the activity with an adult as the leader. Model actions the child will copy. Include activities that use both large muscles (twisting, spinning, hopping, running) and small muscles (snapping, clapping). Let the child take a turn being the leader.

Kindergarten Connection: This game has multiple benefits including developing coordination and controlling movement, as well as following directions.

Book

Whose Legs Are These? by Peg Hall and Ken Landmark.
Examines a variety of animal legs, noting how they look different and function in different ways.

Come and Get It!

Let your child help you in the kitchen. Activities such as stirring, pouring, and measuring will help develop eye-hand coordination.

Kindergarten Connection: In kindergarten, children will lace with cards and beads of various shapes, tie shoes, and catch and throw balls. As they develop the skill of eye-hand coordination, they are preparing for handwriting.

Book

Kitchen for Kids: 100 Amazing Recipes Your Children Can Really Make by Jennifer Low and Mark Burstyn.
Features recipes for kids.

I Can Dress Myself!

Let your child help decide what to wear. Encourage him/her to dress himself/herself. It is okay if the clothes do not match. If the zipper on a coat is small or difficult for your child to grasp, add a paperclip covered with masking tape to make it easier.

Kindergarten Connection: Your child will be expected to take off and put on his/her own outerwear (coats, sweaters, gloves, or boots).

Book

Froggy Gets Dressed by Jonathan London and Frank Remkiewicz.
Froggy hops out into the snow for a winter frolic but is called back by his mother to put on some necessary articles of clothing.

Kindergarten Connection: Doing finger plays promotes small muscle strength and development. Being able to use their small muscles (fingers, wrists) will aid children in holding their writing instruments properly.

Finger Plays

Kindergarten Connection: Washing will not only keep children's hands clean, it will help to prevent the spread of illnesses. Classroom activities can be messy. Children will need to be able to wash their hands often and on their own.

Hand Washing

Put a little flour onto your child's hands and have him/her rub them together. Explain that the flour represents germs. With flour on hands, ask your child to touch a doorknob, then to touch his/her clothing and face. Show that there is flour (germs) left behind. Teach your child how to wash his/her hands using warm water and soap. Have him/her sing the ABC's while rubbing hands together under the water. This should take about 15 seconds, which is about how long it should take thoroughly wash hands. Ask him/her to touch things again. There will be no "germs" left behind!
